Opinion of the Scientific Committee on Foods on Tahitian Noni® Juice. European Commission. SCF/CS/NF/DOS/18 ADD 2 Final. 11, December 2002.
The EU's Scientific Committee on Foods found the consumption of TAHITIAN NONI® Juice to be safe, following a review of acute and subchronic oral toxicity studies, genotoxicity tests, chemical analyses, and allergenicity studies. The No-Observable-Adverse-Effect-Level (NOAEL) was 80 ml/kg, equivalent to >8% body weight.

TAHITIAN NONI® Juice Not a Significant Source of Potassium.
A case report stated that the potassium content of noni juice was 56.3 mEq/L, or 65 mg/ounce, and may be a "surreptitious" source of potassium for patients with renal disease. (Mueller et al. Am J. Kidney Dis. 2000 Feb; 35(2): 330–2). Mueller (USA Today, March 28, 2000) clarified his research, stating he did not analyze TAHITIAN NONI® Juice, but rather a different brand of noni juice and that the amount of potassium was only "as much as you'd get in 2 inches of banana."

Tolson CB, Vest RG, West BJ. Quantitative ICP Mineral Analysis of TAHITIAN NONI® Juice. Tahitian Noni International Research Center. American Fork, Utah. USA 84003. Internal Data.
Potassium content of TAHITIAN NONI® Juice is 40 mg per 1 ounce serving. Compared to Grape juice * 42 mg per 1 ounce serving, Banana* 102 mg per 1 ounce serving and Yogurt* 66 mg per 1 ounce.

Not All Liquid Dietary Supplements Are Created Equal. Palu 'AK, West BJ, Jensen JC. Am J. Hematology 79: 79–82.
TAHITIAN NONI® Juice does not contain any significant quantity of vitamin K. A case of coumadin resistance was reported in a patient drinking juice from the "Noni Juice 4 Everything" brand, which is fortified with vitamin K (Carr ME, Koltz J, Bergeron M. Coumadin Resistance and the Vitamin Supplement "Noni." 2004 Am J. Hematology 77:103–104). This case of coumadin resistance is due to vitamin K and does not apply to the TAHITIAN NONI® Juice Brand.
